The Citizen.

HERE AND THERE.

Bloomfield, Glen Ridge and Montclair Home and Society Notes.

Lent has begun, a fact which the Humble Individual in his search for "items," is fully realized. No more dances, no more teas, no more lunches, nothing Here to-day little There—that is one side of Lent. Some One very wickedly said once that "Lent wasn't fasting, it was slowing down." And yet everyone feels more or less grateful when it comes, of whatever denomination they may be, and it is not from that the impressive little twilight services held every afternoon in the Episcopal Church, see many a devout worshipper who, on Sundays is a Presbyterian, Baptist, or a Methodist.

Literature still flourishes although gayety has declined, and the attendance at the Shakspeare class was admirable this week. Could the immortal bard be present in spirit behind some convenient door, he would shudder with horror to hear the things that are said about him, and would come to his former resting place to hide his "diminished head" for very shame, as he meditated on his own discreditable performances. The play which called forth such criticism this time was "Two Gentlemen of Verona."

The next meeting will be held at Miss Bulkley's, as Miss Sheldon has not yet returned.

∴

The next to the last lecture in the German History course was given Tuesday afternoon, and everyone feels on very friendly not to say intimate terms with the great Napoleon, and talks learnedly of the political outlook of the Kaiser's grandson, or enters into profound discussions as to its connection with the neighboring powers. And all this is the work of Mr. Lyon's hands. More than once the Humble Individual has been completely overcome by the amount of information obtained in one short afternoon, and Some One is getting so literary that she is almost—unbearable.

∴

A mention of the last "Club Informal," at these gatherings in Glen Ridge are called, comes in this week much "better late than never."

On the entertainment committee were Mrs. John Newton, Mrs. Duncan, Mrs. W. B. White and Mrs. Sutton. Thanks to their efforts the evening proved an enjoyable one in every way.

Speaking of literature and new books, somebody must present the palm to Newark. The last effort in the direction of the "Great American Novel" has been made there, and after this let us speak of Newark with bated breath. The effort referred to is called "The Newark Knight," with a K for even Mr. Augustus Watters could find no real romance in a Newark spelled with an N.

The Humble Individual, condemned for a fault of his own to an hour in the D. L. & W. R. R. station, seeing this impressive volume, purchased it, and sat himself down with a sigh of satisfaction. Some gifted person once said, "Give me a cook and a book, and let the proud world go round." But be it known here and now that this must be conditional, for if the "book" is in an uncomfortable corner of a railway station, and the "book" is The Newark Knight,' anyone of any taste would infinitely prefer to take his chances with the 'proud world." Within the covers of the volume mentioned the Humble Individual made the acquaintance of the usual widow with pious disposition, twenty summers, and soulful eyes, and of the usual young man, who befriends the usual widow, keeps the books in a grocery on Broad street, (or Market,) is possessed of knightly manners and a skeptical soul. Him would the widow fain convert, but makes only vague and timid efforts in his behalf. The reader expects the young man to fall in love, and very properly, only the young man, like Pleasant Relerhood, doesn't wish 'to be benighted in that bony light." He lectures on Napoleon instead, and quotes pages of Victor Hugo. Then when the grocery business is dull and lecturing unprofitable, he invokes the Muse and writes poetry, which is inserted in the book by the half dead and inflicted on the "gentle reader," who is apt to be anything but gentle by this time. Nobody ever says anything or does anything. One keeps on reading, hearing, in imagination, the sound of wedding bells at the close. Not so. In a few lines the widow is seized with a fatal disease, dies and is buried, and one is left hopelessly staggered by the uncertainty of it all. The young man, at this juncture, writes poetry. When the reader reaches the end of the volume, he comes face to face with the astounding statement that now are settled the doubts raised by Robert Elsemere, now have Mrs. Humphrey Ward and the Honorable Wm. E. Gladstone been silenced and convinced. He turns hastily back to see if he has missed anything, overlooked any deep or profound theological discussion. He cannot find the arguments spoken of. He finds a display of the young man's bad temper which may answer the purpose, and for the rest—widowed chaos.

Is this quiet or unkind? The Humble Individual is not unkind enough to think that it is one of the evils of the day that we are over-run with these weak, worthless books, having no claim to merit, and doing positive harm in lowering the standard of excellent literary workmanship.

The Two Spring Elections: Township and School.

Almost every citizen knows that the annual election for township officers, and for the determination of moneys to be used for township purposes, is held on the first Tuesday after the second Monday in March. The crowds which surround the voting places during the day and evening of the election, prove this. But less many know that another election, much more important, occurs on Tuesday evening of the following week? And as to judge from the number of those in attendance

As part of the education of our children is important as the construction of the and the equipment of a fire department. The annual meeting of the citizens of the school district should be a crowded affair. At that time the trustees give an account of their stewardship; how the money entrusted to them has been spent; and what are their plans for the coming year. These include the state of the finances; the repairing, enlarging, or erection of school buildings, the qualifications of the teachers; the state of the schools; the improvements made in methods of instruction; the course of studies and text books; their practice in regard to examinations and promotions; and their views about the new principles of teaching, now occupying the careful attention and study of educators throughout the country.

This being the only time, too, when the trustees come directly into contact with their constituents, they expect the parents of the pupils to express their opinion of the school and of its working. Most parents have an idea—a general one at least—of what their children should know and what character and habits they should have when they leave school, in order to fit them for their work in life. Parents understand, also, whether their children are making satisfactory progress in these attainments. At the annual meeting the trustees can gain such knowledge about these things as will help them in their work during the coming year.

Then as to the selection of men for trustees. It is a mistake to suppose that any citizen can fill that office well. It is not enough that he be honorable, honest and successful in business, nor that he be intelligent in the ordinary affairs of life. He should love children, understand their nature and what methods of training are suited to their various degrees of advancement and knowledge. He should be a good judge of teachers, and have time to visit their departments and see their work. It is now universally acknowledged that the physical health of children at school depends much on the seats which they occupy, the ventilation of the rooms, the arrangement of recesses, the calisthenic exercises by which they are trained, and many like conditions. Some of the trustees should thoroughly understand these matters.

A trustee's bed is not altogether one made of roses. What with superintendents, principals, teachers, children, parents, janitor and other employees, he occasionally finds, with the Psalmist, an end of all perfection. Yet men high in position have said that their greatest ambition was to be elected school trustee of the district in which they lived.

The meeting next Tuesday evening should be a large and profitable one.

Mr. Parker's Lecture.

The final lecture of the Public School Course was given Wednesday evening in the Sunday School room of the First Presbyterian Church, and was in every way a most interesting occasion. The lecturer, Hon. Cortlandt Parker, of Newark, was already well-known to his audience, and theme, Abraham Lincoln, is of ever-present value and interest to every thoughtful person. Given such a speaker and such a subject, there can be but one result. From the beginning Mr. Parker showed himself in the fullest sense master of his subject and held with absolute control the sympathy and attention of his hearers. The careful comparison made in the opening of the lecture between the conditions and demands of the periods of the Revolution and of the civil war, served in a most original and impressive way to introduce Mr. Lincoln in his rightful place and power at an eventful era of our history. The brief narrative given of his early life finely depicted in him not a man destined to be a magisterial moulder of the country's destiny, but simply an honest and wise spirit seeking to catch and give room and expression to the better instincts of a mighty people. The portrayal of leading traits in Mr. Lincoln's character, his good sense, his clearness of thought and statement, his justice and gentleness, illustrated repeatedly by incidents that had come under the observation of the speaker in intimate intercourse with President Lincoln, was drawn in excellent taste and with great force. Above all Mr. Parker had the essential qualification that he thoroughly believed in his subject. The lecture was accordingly throughout in form and in spirit a tribute of intelligent admiration and heartfelt esteem from a friend to a friend.

BRIEF NOTES.

—The Annual Election of two school Trustees will be held next Tuesday evening at the Central School House. Plans of the new Berkeley School improvements will be submitted.

—An alarm was sounded at 1.30 P. M. on Saturday, caused by some rubbish taking fire in the cellar of Cadmus' brick building on Bloomfield avenue. It was extinguished before the arrival of the department.

—Mr. Wm C Carl has been engaged to give a series of organ recitals on the Odell organ in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association, (4th avenue and 23d street,) New York City. The first recital takes place this week.

—A special union meeting of the Reform Club and of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms on Friday evening the 22nd, at 8 o'clock, to consider the temperance work in Bloomfield. All who are interested are invited.

—There was a spirited and interesting meeting of the Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. at the rooms, Monday, March 11th. Several plans for raising money for the Building Fund were discussed at this meeting. A bazaar was decided upon, to be given in the Fall. Also an entertainment to be given during the last week in March. Further particulars will appear in next week's CITIZEN.

—Miss Joanna Morris, one of the oldest residents of Morris Place, died on Tuesday morning after an illness of a few days. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon, at the residence of her brother, Mr. L. S. Morris on Bay avenue. Miss Morris will be greatly missed in the home circle where she was much beloved.

—At about 8 o'clock on Friday evening of last week the ice houses of Mr. Freeman situated on Broad street, above Bay avenue, were discovered to be on fire. There being no ice in the buildings, the fire spread with such rapidity that by the time the Department arrived and got to work, little could be done toward saving the property. The loss was about $1,500 and there was no insurance.

—The young men appear to be very much interested in the series of Sunday Evening Sermons just now being preached in the Baptist Church. The subject on Sunday evening will be "The Young Man going from Home."

—The Mutual Aid and Immediate Relief Association of Phil Kearney Council No. 35, N. P. U., will meet at K. of H. Hall, Glenwood avenue, March the 18th, at 7:30 P. M., sharp. Regular Council Meeting at 8:30. All citizens are requested to be present as their is initiation and business of importance.

Amusements.

—The prestidigitatuer Herrmann will perform at Music Hall, Orange, Friday evening, March 22d. His rivals, says the Chicago Times, may surpass him in certain special features, but none of them give such general satisfaction, and, above all, none of them approach him in neatness of execution. What he does is done with a finish that is thoroughly artistic.

—The last of the Theodore Thomas Concerts will be given in Music Hall, Orange, next Thursday evening, March 21st. A very choice program, published elsewhere, will be given.

—The illness of Mr. Frederick Bryton has caused a suspension of performances at Miner's Theatre this week. Mr. T. W. Keene begins an engagement at this house on Monday night, with the following admirable repertoire: "Richelieu," Monday "Hamlet," Friday; "Richard III," Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings; "The Merchant of Venice," Wednesday night and Saturday matinee. This accomplished tragedian deserves full houses

ESSEX COUNTY DIRECTORY.
MESSRS. F. N. MOFFAT & CO.,
Who have in the past so successfully published the Directory of Bloomfield and Montclair, have decided to make their Directory cover the whole of Essex County, outside the City of Newark. MOFFAT'S DIRECTORY will hereafter contain the names and addresses of all the residents of the CITY OF ORANGE, the Townships of EAST ORANGE, WEST ORANGE, SOUTH ORANGE, BLOOMFIELD, (which includes Glen Ridge, Fairview, Watsessing and Brookdale), MONTCLAIR, BELLEVILLE, FRANKLIN, CALDWELL (which includes Verona and Roseland), LIVINGSTON, CLINTON (which includes Irvington), and MILBURN (which includes Short Hills). It will contain a complete Business Directory of each Town; a Church Directory, also the name, location, date of organization, days and hours of meeting, and names of officers of all Societies in the above territory, together with the names of Township Officers and Fire Departments, making it a compendium of information invaluable to business men and residents of the County.
A thorough house to house canvass for names will be made in each town and nothing will be left undone to make the work accurate and complete.
RELIABLE MAPS of the whole territory covered will accompany each book.
The publishers respectfully ask the support of the business men to this valuable work.
